HOCHTIEF to supply floor covering manufacturer with electrical power

Armstrong DLW awards supply contract for 15 years

HOCHTIEF Energy Management won the contract to supply Armstrong DLW in Delmenhorst, Germany, with electrical power, water and steam. As production operations at the Delmenhorst site are governed by special conditions, Europe's leading manufacturer of linoleum floor covering requires interruption-free power supply. This is now guaranteed by the Essen-based HOCHTIEF subsidiary for a period of 15 years. The contract parties have agreed to keep the volume of the assignment confidential.

Armstrong DLW manufactures floor coverings in finely meshed production processes that must not be subject to non-scheduled interruptions. To avoid this, HOCHTIEF Energy Management will construct three new co-generation plants. By employing central machine control, it guarantees that the power supply will not be interrupted. In addition, the service provider will build a treatment plant for river water and supplies the production site both with service water and steam.
